Rees Cowne to stand as an Independent in Clacton

Rees Cowne, Chief Operating Officer of Kruger Cowne, has confirmed he is seeking nomination as an Independent candidate in Clacton.

Cowne has spent ten years running operations at Kruger Cowne, working across business, culture, music, entertainment and politics. Outside the agency he is the founder of StageSide (formerly TalentZ) and StageAlly, a music tool built out of his own creative work.

A focused position

Cowne said: "My focus is on building a fair, powerful and economically serious Britain. Clacton is where I want that work to start, and where I want it to stay."

His platform sets out six priorities for Clacton:

- Work that pays. Real jobs, real wages and real training routes for young people.
- Safe streets and honest policing.
- A high street that rewards independent operators over absentee landlords.
- Health services measured in days, not weeks, including mental health.
- A coast that is cared for. Clean water, protected beaches, working infrastructure.
- An MP who shows up and is judged on presence, not press releases.

On standing

Cowne said: "I am standing because the people I want to represent deserve someone who says the same thing in Westminster that he says in person."
